

DPRI Receives a Letter of Appreciation from Kyoto Prefecture

June 19, 2013 Disaster Prevention Research Institute (DPRI) received a special letter of appreciation from Kyoto Prefecture for its significant contribution to the improvement of the prefecture's safety, security and welfare. The letter was presented particularly for DPRI's long-standing devotion to minimizing damage from natural disasters as an international core institute on disaster prevention research and for its participation in the planning of measures for large-scale disasters and nuclear emergencies in Kyoto.

Professor Naoto Oshiman, Director of DPRI, received the letter from Keiji Yamada, Governor of Kyoto Prefecture at the ceremony for the founding anniversary of the Kyoto Prefectural Government.

